AGRICULTURE

A planter's son who enrolled in the College of Agriculture in 1856 would never recognize the changes that have occured in in agricultural professions since that time.

"Agriculture is now more synonymous with food than with farming," said Dean Gordon Cairns. Modern agriculture involves studying the relationship of population to natural resources, the efficient use of technology and natural resources in food production, and the impact of urbanization on rural life and the development of rural communities.

The new dimensions of agriculture are shown in the professions entered by graduates of the college. Only 5-10% of the college's students go into farming, while the majority enter such diverse fields as private industry, government, education aand research.

Unlike the curricula of the University's other professionally oriented colleges, the agriculture curricula are not aimed at preparing students for employment only in fields related to agriculture.

Degrees in botany, entomology and pre-theology, besides that of agricultural engineering, may also be obtained by pursuing various other lines of study offered within the College of Agriculture.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE

Dean Ray Ehrensberger

The University of Maryland's own University College is indeed a "world university." Though first established in 1947 to offer evening courses to area adults, its operations now cover over 5,000,000 square miles in 24 countries on four continents.

The college's overseas programs, designed mainly to extend University services to government personnel in foreign countries and servicemen stationed abroad, now offer two degrees — a Bachelor of Arts in General Studies and a Bachelor of Science in Military Studies.

One unique aspect of this "world university" is that it claims its own "flying dean." Since 1952 when he became dean of University College, Dr. Ray Ehrensberger has clocked over 4,000 hours in prop-planes, spending nearly six months a year overseas observing and directing the college's numerous operations.

In October the United States Air Force honored "Flying Dean" Ehrensberger with the highest civilian award, citing him as the man chiefly responsible for initiating the program which has enabled 17,000 servicemen to earn degrees abroad.

ARCHITECTURE

Dean John W. Hill

The School of Architecture, the University's newest college, opened this fall with a faculty of four and an enrollment of 54 first-year students.

The school is now located in building DD in the gulch; however, a new building will tentatively be completed by September, 1970.

No official curriculum has been set up for the five-year architectural program as yet, but a studio course in the processes of design is now being offered and more courses will be added next year.

Dean John W. Hill hopes to limit required courses to create a wide selection of professional electives from the School of Architecture and other colleges. In giving students as much freedom as possible, they are able to develop their own interests and still remain within the range of the program.

Instituting a master's program is also part of Dean Hill's future plans.

The growth of the school will reflect the changing role of the architect in modern society. "Architecture does not refer just to the planning of a single building, but involves complex systems of community planning," Hill said.

"The goal is not just the creation of a single work of beauty, but the enhancement of the quality of life."

ARTS and SCIENCES

Dean Charles A. Manning

With its diversity of departments and course offerings, the College of Arts and Sciences is a university within a university.

An undergraduate enrollment of approximately 10,000 students (or one third of the university population) gives A&S a wider cross-section of student-types than many of the other colleges. The 29 possible majors, ranging from the almost totally aesthetic fine arts to the extremely practical physical and biological sciences, belie the possibility of the stereotype A&S student.

"The responsibility of satisfying varying needs and demands, stemming from the broad spectrum of interests and temperaments of the students, is the real problem of the College of Arts and Sciences," noted Dr. Norman C. Laffer, associate dean of the college.

Besides being a university in itself, the college has another unique aspect. "More than any other college," Laffer said, "A&S is a service college." Since all students must take the basic University requirements of history, mathematics and speech offered through A&S, the college performs what Laffer termed "the dual role" of providing a service program for all students while maintaining an identity all its own.

BPA

Of the University's nine colleges, the College of Business and Public Administraion can most clearly be called the college with the "split personality." Its six departments are divided evenly between academically and professionally oriented programs. Information Systems Management, Journalism and Public Relations, and Business Administration lean toward professional training of students for specific fields while Economics, Government and Politics, and Geography emphasize broad undergraduate programs and later specialization in graduate and law schools. "In a sense, you might call us schizophrenic," noted Doctor Don C. Piper, assistant professor of government and politics.

BPA's split personality is also seen at the graduate level, with the professionally oriented degree of Doctor of Business Administration now being offered, in addition to the academic degrees of Master of Arts and Sciences, and Doctor of Philosophy.

Expansion also characterizes BPA. Student enrollment has more than doubled in the past six years, and the faculty has been growing at a faster rate than in other colleges. The ever-widening scope of activities of the Bureaus of Governmental Research and of Business and Economic Research, the two problem-oriented research projects undertaken by the college, further exemplifies this spirit of expansion.

EDUCATION

In the words of Dr. L. Morris McClure, associate dean of education, "Preparing professional workers at all levels and in all fields of public school work," has long been the goal set by the College of Education. Today this preparation is characterized by progress, and an acute awareness by everyone of its importance in every aspect of the educational process.

The College of Education is the only institution at the University that prepares its 5,000 undergraduates for any kind of teaching position, from kindergarten through college, in the demanding field of special education, as well as in counselling and administration.

Certain public schools are now being staffed by University training programs, so that teachers may better supervise students in their preparation for the teaching experience.

From a physical standpoint, the technological center in the basement of the Education Building represents progress at its peak. Television, teaching machines, and electronic teaching aids signify an all-new media through which innovations in both the learning and teaching processes are being made possible.

Academically, the graduate program promises to be the greatest contributing factor to progress and the "new approach" in teacher education. Of the 1,500 graduate students, 400 are now full time teachers working part time on degrees, a marked and rapid increase over the past four years. The new field of graduate training in educational technology is further evidence of Maryland's advancing graduate study program.

ENGINEERING

The College of Engineering is training its 2,500 undergraduates and 650 graduate students in one of the most rapidly expanded professions of modern society.

"Our problem," said Dean Robert B. Beckmann, "is that we're training students for what is yet to come." Scientific and technological advances have opened many new fields of engineering which did not exist ten years ago, such as environmental, nuclear and biomedical engineering.

The need to staff these new phases of engineering is complicated by the steady evolution of the standard fields. Civil engineering, for example, now requires an understanding of community planning as well as technical skill in designing efficient roads and bridges. "Engineering now needs human relations experts," Beckman noted.

Students in the six undergraduate programs – areospace, civil, chemical, electrical, fire protection and mechanical engineering – are given a broad, rigorous background in chemistry, mathematics and physics, enabling them to enter fields as they arise.

The college has rapidly expanding graduate programs which include courses in the newer phases of engineering as well as the standard fields. Courses are also offered to working engineers so they may keep abreast of new developments in their professions.

HOME ECONOMICS

Dean Marjory Brooks

The College of Home Economics and its courses of study are often wrongly stereotyped by students and faculty not connected with the college. Far from being mainly concerned with such practicalities as cooking and sewing, "home economics is actually an intangible subject in a way," commented Dr. Marjory Brooks, dean of the college. It focuses on people in a family unit and draws form and applies principles of the behavioral and physical sciences to study situations which affect family stability.

A broad background in sociology, psychology, chemistry, and physiology is interwoven in the College's five undergraduate programs — home economics education, housing and applied design, textiles and clothing, general home economics, and food and nutrition. The 808 undergraduate students will have jobs awaiting them in such diversified fields as education, business, dietetics, community planning, designing, and experimental research.

"There is a great need for professional home economists," emphasized Dr. Brooks, "and a striking development is that more and more men are entering the field, especially in housing and applied design, family life, and nutrition." Seven of the college's 40 faculty members are men, she noted, and other colleges of home economics show an even higher figure.

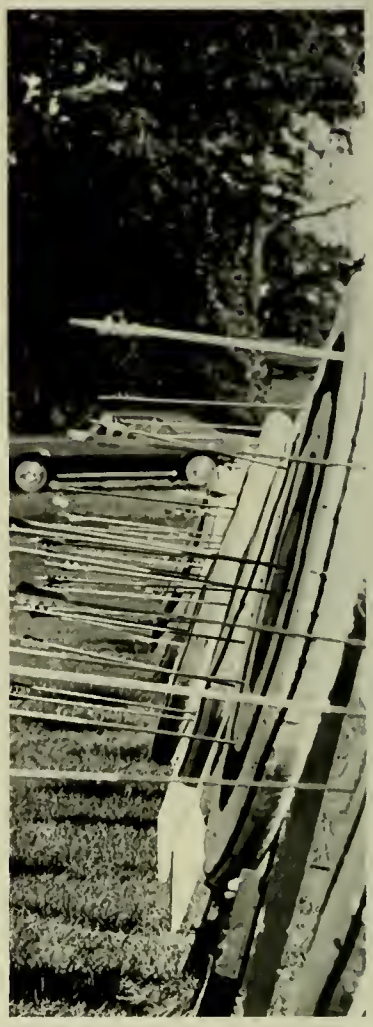
PHYSICAL EDUCATION, RECREATION, and HEALTH



The College of Physical Education, Recreation, and Health is oriented in two directions—toward University students as a whole and toward its own majors. Its programs combine health and physical education courses required of all undergraduates with rigorous professionally oriented curricular in the fields of health, education, physical education, recreation, dance, and physical therapy. Although primarily a teacher-training college, many of its graduates fill such occupations as municipal or county park and recreational planners and physical therapists. The college's graduate program trains students for executive and administrative positions in the fields of physical or health education, and recreation.

Extensive recreational facilities and activities are also made available to students through the men's intramurals program and the Women's Recreation Association. "Many of the skills taught in our physical fitness programs are carried over into students' lives after they graduate," commented Dean Lester M. Fraley. "We offer a wide selection of sports in the required physical education program so that stulents can develop skills they will enjoy using later."

PHI KAPPA PHI

Phi Kappa Phi academic honorary was founded in 1897 at the University of Maine and is now a national organization of over 80 chapters. Its sole purpose is the recognition and encouragement of superior scholarship.

Members are selected on the recommendation of deans of colleges. They comprise the upper ten percent of the graduating class, junior and senior students possessing at least a 3.3 cumulative average and 60 credit hours, masters candidates who have obtained a 3.7 average and doctoral candidates with a 3.5 average.

Last semester 172 students were inducted into the chapter at the University.

WHO'S WHO
AMONG STUDENTS IN AMERICAN COLLEGES AND UNIVERSITIES

Leadership, scholarship, co-operation in educational and extra-curricular activities, citizenship and future promise are key words in the selection of candidates for Who's Who Among Students in American Colleges and Universities.

To be chosen for this honor a student is first recommended by the university and is then voted on by the national organization.

WILSON H. ELKINS:

. . . the man

. . . the president.

"The purpose of a university is to perform at a high level in all of its endeavors and to elevate the individual and society."

ADMINISTRATORS

The goal of the administrators of our university is of a dual nature: on the one hand, there is the desire to minimize tuition in order to provide greater opportunity for those pursuing higher education, while in the same breath, there is a constant effort to attain increased academic standards, so that a position of educational leadership may be achieved.

In addition, the administrators have become increasingly aware of the growing concern of students with regard to administrative affairs. In the words of Dr. Elkins, "This is a movement which deserves the most thoughtful consideration of the students, faculty, and administration."

It is his feeling, along with other administrators, that more participation on the part of the student body in administrative affairs is feasible, "if there is a feeling of mutual respect between the two."

THE GOVERNOR

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT
ANNAPOLIS, MARYLAND 21404

SPIRO T. AGNEW
GOVERNOR

As members of the 1968 University of Maryland graduating class you will face many challenges as you play vital roles in charting the future of our State and Nation.

This University, under the direction of President Wilson H. Elkins, and dedicated members of the faculty, has provided you the opportunity to receive an education of the highest caliber. It is my hope that you will utilize this education with the same spirit of dedication in meeting the difficult and complex problems that lie ahead of us.

Congratulations and best wishes for the future.

Sincerely,

Spiro T. Agnew

ALUMNI

Homecoming

Theater Party

Ray Williams awards John Smith, Chairman of the Board of Seaboard Coastline Railroad, the Third Annual National Distinguished Alumnus Award at the Homecoming '67 Luncheon.

Col. J. Logan Schutz

Director, Alumni Affairs

Promoting the interest and welfare of the University of Maryland is of primary concern to the Alumni Association. Its objective is to serve as a pipeline between the University, the undergraduates, the alumni and the citizens of Maryland.

Although established in 1892, it wasn't until 1948 that the organization saw its present form. It is directed by an Alumni Council composed of three representatives from each chapter, an "M" Club representative, a representative from each geographical area and past-presidents of the Council.

Besides Homecoming and Spring Reunion, the group sponsors numerous speaker-dinners, and awards scholarships on behalf of the various clubs.

THE GREEK

An all new and vocal edition of THE GREEK was born in 1967-1968 to promote the fraternity and sorority systems of the University of Maryland. Through in-depth features and columns, colorful and timely news reporting, and an abundance of imaginative photography, THE GREEK's newspaper format took on a new look while its content became more meaningful and beneficial to the campus community.

With its exciting journalistic, photographic, business and promotional expansion came the necessity for an extensive and diverse staff organization of 134 specialists who currently represent every aspect of Greek, student and administrative life at Maryland. House correspondents, editorial board members, columnists who covered everything from WRA to Society, and layout, promotion, space sales, publicity and editorial people were everywhere this year doing what had to be done to put some teeth into a paper that had ceased to be all that it could and should be.

Founded in September 1962, THE GREEK became a professional publication under the aegis of its eighth editor while reaching new heights in quantity of issues and campus circulation. As one volunteer worker put it, "Now THE GREEK's got a bark and a bite."

Way back when, during the 1956-1957 academic year, a new secret society was born at the University of Maryland. Identified by the letters "TTTT," the group initially was established along the philanthropic lines of the University of Virginia's prominent and super-secretive "Seven Society" for male leaders.

Three primary and obvious differences between the two societies have emerged since the 4T's inception, however. Rather than limiting its membership to seven men, Maryland's 4T male leader membership fluxuates. At its founding they numbered 20. Today, its membership is slightly smaller. In addition, the Terrapin group expanded its objectives beyond that of philanthropic exercise to include the publication of a periodic newsletter of socio/political/editorial commentary "for the betterment of the student body" that is delivered imaginatively at all hours of the day and night. Finally, the 4T's also have their own social events — without revealing the nature of the occasion to their dates or guests.

While it may come as a surprise to some, the 4T's have continued to involve themselves in good works such as the purchasing of clothing and food for orphanages and needy families at Christmas and Easter. All their contributions are made with anonymity and a mysterious flair. All operating funds for their diverse activities are secured from membership dues and contributions.

As from the start, 4T men are always Greeks anl campus leaders. Naturally, the identity of each member is kept secret, and to insure their privacy and "safety," the 4T's conduct their formal business meetings and social functions off campus. Their publication, the content and tone of which have changed considerally in recent years, is also printed elsewhere.

Maryland's 4T group was formed in 1956 after the University administration disbanded the Gate and Key Society for its flagrant opposition to President Elkins' "no booze on campus" dictum. In 1967-1968, the 4Ts remain a mystery.

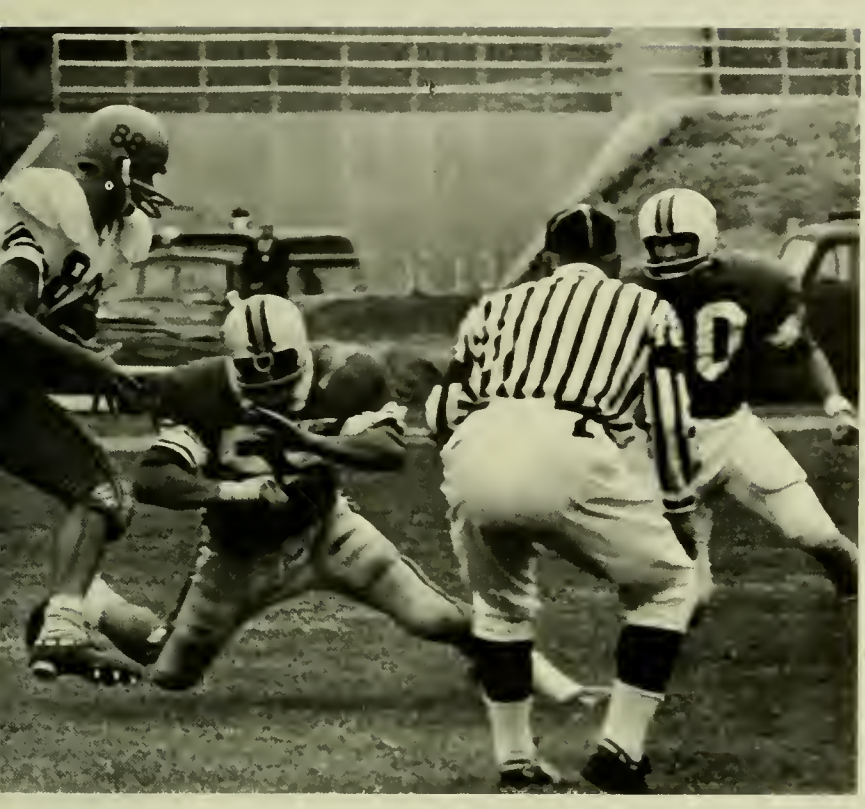
In the 75 year football history of Maryland, no team ever had a season like the one endured by the 1967 gridmen. In losing all nine of their games, they suffered through the worst season ever for a Terp football squad.

Truly, this was a team of destiny. While the 1967 Terps were not a very strong team, neither were they a very lucky one. From beginning to end, fate seemed to guide the Terps.

This was a team that was deserted by its coach, Lou Saban, late in December, 1966, and had to adjust to a new head mentor for the second consecutive year. This was a team that had one of its easiest opponents, George Washington, drop football a few months before the season began. This was a team that had its All-American quarterback candidate, Alan Pastrana, injured in spring practice, thus out for the season.

The season began in Norman, Oklahoma, with the Sooners taking the opening kickoff and marching for a touchdown. It ended in Byrd Stadium with the Maryland defensive unit futilely chasing a Virginia quarterback in his backfield as the clock — and the season — ran out.

For coach Bob Ward, it was a year of frustration. In his attempt to break a losing streak that had reached 13 by the season's end, he tried everything from personnel changes (five quarterbacks in one year) to magic (red helmets in the season's final game). Nothing worked.



For the players, especially seniors like defensive captain Jim Lavrusky, Billy Van Heusen, Pat Baker, Art Brzostowski, Ralph Donofrio, Fred Gawlick, Bob Haley, Tom Myslinski, Lou Stickel, Tony Santy, and Chuck Tine, this was a season of hard work without the reward of a single victory.

Individually, the offense was led by Rick Carlson, who scored 28 points in his role as placekicker and end. He also led the team in receptions with 24. Junior Bill Lovett retained the team rushing title, gaining 499 yards, while Jim Sniscak was the most effective passer with 26 completions in 43 attempts for 287 yards. Sophomore Chuck Drimal was the statistical leader with 54 completions in 123 attempts for 669 yards.

The most outstanding of the defensive performers were Lavrusky and Wally Stalnaker. Stalnaker led the team in interceptions while Lavrusky, a star all year, played what Ward called "one of the finest individual games I've ever seen" against Syracuse, making 18 individual tackles and assisting in nine others.

Despite the good performances, the Terps were unable to make it into the winner's column. Perhaps their best game came against powerful Syracuse, when the Orangemen were held to a 7-3 win. There were only two other contests in which the Terps came within two touchdowns of their opponent.

Having hit the low point of its football history, Maryland clearly is hoping that 1967 marked the "end of an era" — one that has seen five non-winning seasons in a row.

SOCCER

Coach Doyle Royal said before the start of this soccer season that "the number one goal for the 1967 squad would be to make the NCAA national tournament." Early in the season The Terp booters showed that they had taken the Coach's words to heart as they defeated N. C. State, Howard, Virginia, Catholic University, and Georgetown in rapid succession. After this quick start, the team travelled to Penn State to face the Nittany Lions. The trip north proved to be a journey into the Lion's den as inclement weather, injuries, and some poor officiating hampered the Terp's play. In a rough contest, the Marylanders were held to a 2-2 tie, but this partial setback was only a slight detour on the Maryland victory road.

The only blemish on the booter's record came at the hands of that perpetual Terrapin baiter, Navy, who defeated the team by a score of 2 to 1. The key day in the booter's season came on November 13, when Royal's forces captured both the ACC Title and a bid to the national soccer tournament.

This year's team, which featured a balanced scoring attack and tight defense, carried a 9-1-1 record into their first-round tournament contest with powerful Michigan State. State downed the hard-fighting Terps by a score of 4-1 in a contest which was much closer than the score would indicate. The Maryland cause was hampered because two important freshman players, Mike Walker and Al Emminizer, were ineligible due to an outmoded NCAA rule which, ironically, was changed by the athletic association's governing board after the season was over.

The top scorer on the squad was Larry Ruhs, but Bob Connor and Ted Swieconek also provided a strong scoring punch. Senior co-captain Mike Rioux provided the leadership and steadiness which is essential to any closely knit team, while All-American Alvaro Bitencourt consistently was able to produce the game-saving type of spectacular play.

BASKETBALL

The Atlantic Coast Conference has often been derided by some local sports writers because of the poor caliber of league competition in football, but this type of criticism certainly should not be applied to the ACC 1967-68 basketball race. This year, the Conference was one in which two teams were ranked in the top ten nationally. Several other colleges in the Conference also fielded formidable "fives".

First year head coach Frank Fellows said before the start of this year's basketball season that the fans should not expect too much from this edition of the Terp roundballers. Fellows felt that this would be a rebuilding year since Maryland's schedule pitted a young squad against some of the toughest teams in the nation. His words proved prophetic in several ways as the team struggled to an 8-15 regular season record while meeting ACC powerhouses Duke and North Carolina and such outstanding non-conference teams as the University of Texas at El Paso and Southern Illinois University.

The tone for this season seemed to have been set in the opening game when Maryland dropped a 76-71 decision to Penn State after a surprisingly poor shooting night. The shooting doldrums continued to plague the Marylanders as the season wore on and after 11 games, it was beginning to look as though the basketball team would suffer through a season even more disastrous than the one that had been suffered by the football squad. Due to an unusual scheduling arrangement, the Terp hoopsters found themselves continuously on the road during a large part of the season. Their sojourn far from the friendly floorboards of Cole Field House took a heavy toll and the final away game tally for the season stood at 1 win and 12 losses. Even the single victory was in a sense a local success since it was a triumph over George Washington University at Fort Meyer, Virginia. The home record proved to be a much different matter as Maryland won the last four home games and finished the season with a 7-3 mark before the home crowds.

The trip south to the ACC Tournament at Raleigh provided one last opportunity for the team to add some sparkle to a generally mediocre season, but the spectre of the Maryland road record seemed to hover in the background as an omen of ill fortune. The Terps faced N. C. State in the opening round of the tournament and were hoping to avenge two regular season losses to the Wolfpack. In a game in which both teams appeared to be suffering from chronic cases of the "tournament jitters", the Marylanders came up on the short end of the score after hitting only 31.7 per cent from the field. The Terps' loss to N. C. State marked the eighth time in the last ten years that a Maryland basketball squad has failed to advance past the first round of the ACC's annual basketball extravaganza.

Although the 1967-68 final record of 8 wins and 16 losses was not the kind of tally that Frank Fellows had hoped for in his first year as head coach, there were several bright spots . . . The play of senior co-captains Rich Drescher and Bill Jones provided consistent leadership and key baskets at several crucial points during the late season home stand. John Avery was the most effective shooter with a 47 per cent accuracy from the field while Pete Johnson led the team in scoring. The most promising development for the future of M.U. basketball was the outstanding play of sophomores Rod Horst, Tom Milroy, and especially Will Hetzel whose 14 point plus scoring average and 184 rebounds were important factors in the team's winning efforts.

Varsity wrestling continues to be a focal point in the winter sports scene at the University of Maryland. Under the able tutorship of Head Coach William E. "Sully" Krouse, in his 20th year as wrestling coach at the University, the Terp grapplers have consistently turned in a winning record.

The current season began with the Terp matmen journeying to New London, Connecticut, for the U.S. Coast Guard Academy tournament. Maryland walked away from the meet with the top prize, which seemed indicative of a highly successful season. The new year opened at Bethlehem, Pennsylvania, where the Terps met the Lehigh Engineers, thereby embarking on an impressive schedule of matches which included Penn State, Navy, Army, and Pittsburgh. Atlantic Coach Conference opponents included Virginia, North Carolina, Duke, and North Carolina State. Within the ACC, the Terps have compiled an enviable all-time conference record of 80 wins against 6 losses, a record which bears witness to the excellence in coaching of Sully Krouse and his competent assistants.

This year's squad, although losing several members through graduation, had much experience and ability in its returning sophomores and juniors, and upheld the Terp wrestling tradition, by employing a volatile combination of desire, drive, strength, and skill.

SWIMMING

On first reflection it might seem that a digital computer and a college swimmer would have little in common. But Maryland Swimming Coach Bill Campbell with the aid of senior Joe Wechsler this year welded Campbell's Competitive Swimming Index to the University's 6.5 million dollar IBM 7094 computer.

The CSI system assigns a single index number to the ability of the individual swimmer in each of the four racing strokes and indicates the average number of seconds that the individual ranks above the nation's best time. The system has stirred world-wide interest and has come into increasing use on the high school and college level throughout the United States.

It is not at all surprising that Coach Campbell was the developer of this innovative system for evaluating swimming ability. His sharp mind and keen coaching sense have already been demonstrated by the enviable record of 116 wins against 28 losses which his Maryland swimming teams have compiled in the 12 years that Coach Campbell has been resident swimming mentor at College Park.

Heim, Pinkerton, Salkind, Imondi, Denkevitz.

This year's team completed the most successful dual-meet tank season that Campbell's squads have ever achieved, finishing wifth a record of 12 and 1. The tankmen won handsomely against most of their opponents. Their only defeat in dual competition came at the hands of N. C. State by a score of 66-47. Led by seniors Bruce Alston, Phil Denkevitz, Bill Dranginis, Jim Hill, V. J. Meleski, Doug Springer, co-captains Dave Dodge and Wayne Pawlowski, and a talented group of underclassmen including Mike Golub, Dave Heim, Dennis Imondi, and Joe Schwartzel, the Terp tankmen submerged strong teams such as Duke, Navy, and North Carolina. The team's strength was appreciably increased by an effective diving contingent composed of Bob Rydze, Ron Hoffman, and Don Dolce. Its depth, which had been a strong point, suffered considerably after the loss of All-American Phil Denkevitz in January upon the completion of his varsity eligibility.

The Terps wound up the regular season in third position nationally and were co-favorites with N. C. State in the ACC Tournament. The team's performance in this meet was disappointing as they slipped to fourth place, finishing behind N. C. State, North Carolina, and South Carolina. Three swimmers hoped to recoup this temporary reversal in the NCAA Finals in Hanover, New Hampshire at the end of March.

CROSS COUNTRY & TRACK

To the unitiated, the name Jim Kehoe may not mean a great deal, but track enthusiasts know that for the University of Maryland Kehoe means TRACK POWER. Coach Kehoe in 1967 again demonstrated that rigorous training, top athletes, and excellent coaching are an unbeatable combination as his charges brought the Atlantic Coast Conference track crown to Maryland for the twelfth consecutive year. This year's squad, although hampered by a string of injuries to such key men as Frank Costello, Tom Gagner, Ed Marks, and Bruce Carson, showed the strength and depth which are essential to any successful team, and forged to another undefeated season.

The Kehoe magic seems to roll along no matter what the season, and this fall when the Sunday duffers gave up the fairways and woods of the University Golf Course to the harriers on Coach Kehoe's cross country circuit, the Maryland victory string continued. The cross country team, led by standout runners Dave Starnes, John Amoss, and Ernie O'Boyle, rolled to another undefeated season while posting a record of 6-0.

LACROSSE

When the North American Indians put together some sticks, netting, and a hard wood ball, to invent the game of lacrosse, they could have had no idea that in the 20th century lacrosse would find a permanent home near the shores of the Chesapeake Bay. That is exactly what happened, and at Maryland, Lacrosse has become one of the major 'happenings' on the University's sports scene.

The 1967 Terp lacrossemen proved themselves to be equal to the task of maintaining the Maryland lacrosse tradition, and finished the season in a three-way tie for the 'national championship' while compiling a record of nine victories against one defeat. The team was charged up and ready for action beginning with the first whistle of the season and within a few weeks had chalked up five straight victories. After this impressive start, the Terps faced their old nemesis Navy at the Academy. The game proved to be a typical Terp-Middie struggle and the issue was in doubt until the final gun. The Terps, perhaps suffering from the loss of All-American defenseman Alan Pastrana who sustained a knee injury the day before the big game, fell behind by six in the first half. The team never gave up, however and led by the spirit and ability of the likes of Jack Heim (All-American senior attack) the Marylanders closed the gap and almost pulled the game out, although finally going down to defeat by a score of 10 to 8. At the time, this loss seemed to preclude the possibility of a national championship, but fortune decided otherwise when Johns Hopkins defeated Navy. The Maryland team, having already captured another Atlantic Coast Conference title, now had an opportunity to share the national crown if they could overcome Hopkins in the final game of the season.

On Saturday, May 20, 1967, Maryland faced Johns Hopkins at Byrd Stadium before one of the largest crowds ever to witness a lacrosse match at the University. The character and class of the Maryland players was ably demonstrated by their performance under the tremendous pressure of this must' game. When the final score was tallied, the Terp lacrossemen were victorious and had provided a fitting capstone (a share in the national championship) to a most successful Maryland lacrosse season.

BASEBALL

Baseball at the collegiate level may never realize the gate receipts that many of the other sports do, but at Maryland in the last few years students and sports fans alike have watched a sport, a team, and a coach come of age. Led by such intangibles as "desire," "hard work," and "constant practice," Maryland's diamondmen under Head Coach Jack Jackson have served notice on the other Atlantic Coast Conference teams that they are a force to be reckoned with.

After failing to retain their first ACC title with a mediocre 11-12 season in 1966, the Terps opened the 1967 season with mixed emotions yet achieved excellent results. While fielding some twelve lettermen and sixteen sophomores, Maryland easily disposed of 12 of their first 13 opponents. At this point, ill fortune struck, and bad weather forced the Terrapins to cancel an important series of prepatory games before their stretch drive for the title against "Tobacco Road" opponents. The trip south was a disappointment, and the slumping Terps were flat when they faced title contender Clemson in a crucial doubleheader at College Park. The Maryland squad dropped both ends of the doubleheader to Clemson, and after having made such an impressive start, the Maryland nine had to settle for second place in the Conference while finishing the season with a strong 12-6 record. Even though the team failed to regain the title, it was not unheralded. It had batted a nifty .272 overall and had smashed out 16 home runs, while in the pitching department, sophomore Tom Bradley joined junior Mark Harris to post an 11-4 mark. To top off a successful season, sophomore John Hetrick was awarded All-America honors for his performance as Terp centerfielder.

SGA

A student spends a major portion of his college career attempting to influence his environment. Some students organize events, others supplement their studies by participating in major club activities, and still others work toward improving their environment by trying to influence university policy on academics or social regulations.

The results from such efforts may be as fatal as they are fortunate. There is a full and enjoyable social calendar, affording tremendous opportunities for cultural and intellectual stimulation outside the classroom. University policies change, however slowly, to meet today's norms. Yet some events fail . . . socially, financially and intellectually. Much time and effort is spent on projects which see little or no progress.

To the individual involved in the mechanics and leadership, however, effort represents more than a desire to improve an environment. It is the joy of hopes and plans of the things to come. It is the drudgery of day to day administrative details; some of value, some not. It is the empty feeling of having to turn down projects for lack of money. It is the frustration of not having enough manpower to get things done. It is the proverbial happiness of success and the agony of failure.

Is it all worth it? You sometimes wonder. But the answer is inevitably: Yes. For the joy is in the striving, and although you may not realize all your goals, the sum of your efforts equals progress.

PRE-MED

RADIO and TELEVISION WORKSHOP

Growth and recognition were key words of the Radio and Television Workshop during 1967-68. As the selective membership of the Workshop grew to over fifty, its prominence as a permanent establishment in the field of campus media became a reality.

Proof of the Workshop's expansion was the noticeable number of new programs aired over the University's closed-circuit television system. Students were offered a variety of weekly shows to watch between classes, ranging from the satirical review, "Ballyhoo!," to the more serious public affairs shows, directed by Joe Policy, president of the Workshop.

Under the guidance of executive officers, producers and directors, students of the Radio and TV Workshop learned the "nuts and bolts" of television programming. Training sessions were followed by work on actual shows, and newly acquired knowledge took the form of first-hand experience. All phases of programming, from acting and directing to floor sweeping, were performed by Workshop members.

Although selection of its members is restrictive, the Workshop anticipates an expansion of its membership and the production of more shows for its growing audience.

ANGEL FLIGHT

Angel Flight at the University of Maryland is only one chapter of a national honorary service organization of young women, chosen on the basis of poise, intelligence and interest in the Armed Services.

Their goal is three-fold: to strengthen and promote interest in the Air Force, to give college women across the United States knowledge and information concerning the services, and to aid the progress of the Arnold Air Society and Corps of Cadets.

Nationally recognized at 130 schools across the country, Puerto Rico and Hawaii, Angel Flight chapters center their programs around the Air Force, the campus and the community.

As official hostesses of the University, they usher, host and serve at various campus functions, including the President's Convocation.

SCUBA DIVERS:

"The Underwater Diving Terrapins"

From a basis of fifteen divers in the Spring of 1965, the University's Scuba Diving Club has surfaced to its present total of over 60 members. Making waves with the motto: "Safety Through Education," the club is trained by members of the National Association of Underwater Instructors. NAVI is rated as one of the world's best training organizations for amateur divers. Two Underwater Diving Terrapins, Tom Kenney and Bob Landers, are certified NAVI instructors.

Maryland's Scuba Diving Club dipped down to the Florida Keys during Semester Break for its annual "camp-diving trip." Those who continue to sample the local waters take "ice dives" in water temperatures as low as thirty degrees.

For that light touch of incidental inspiration, the club entertains rumors of buried and sunken treasure hidden in the muddy depths of Maryland. And for those who seek adventure in the underwater world, Maryland's Scuba Diving Club serves as a source for acquiring the knack of safe yet skillful diving.

SKYDIVERS : "The Fallouts"

Acid? Who needs it? Want to expand your mind? Try jumping from a plane going 80 miles per hour a quarter of a mile in the sky!

The exciting sport of skydiving has come to Maryland via "The Fallouts." The club, new last year, was organized to provide an economical way for students desiring to learn the sport.

Club president, Kevin Burke, provides most of the instruction for those wanting something a little different. Instruction involves one day on the ground and five static line jumps. A static line jump is executed with the aid of a line, secured to the aircraft to assure opening of the canopy. The canopy, or chute, is a hemispherical umbrella-shaped nylon device with sections which can be opened and closed to guide the descent.

Upon completion of proper instruction and approval, the novice can make a free fall jump, one in which he opens the canopy himself.

SKI CLUB

Rolling in the green stuff is part of beginner's luck at the Terrapin Ski Club. The green stuff is grass of the non-hippie variety and on Tuesday nights more than twenty novice skiiers struggle with boots, skis, and poles on slopes around Ritchie Coliseum. They line up on grass and, under instruction of the club's Dryland Ski School, are introduced to basic skiing techniques.

Six hundred strong, the Ski Club hits the slopes from Maryland to Canada. One hundred members skiied in Northern Vermont, and Sutton, Quebec, during the Christmas holidays. Another hundred members skiied at Haystack, Vermont, during semester break.

A Ski Bum trip is the Easter vacation answer to Fort Lauderdale. Skiers tackle a slope a day in New Hampshire and Vermont. Meanwhile, Spring Semester's weekend trips include Blue Knob and Seven Springs, Pennsylvania.

Rugged skiiers of a more acclaimed variety are the twelve members (two are girls) of the Terrapin Ski Club Racing Team. This is the first year the club has had a team; it has been making Federation International du Ski points in the Eastern Amateur Ski Association. Dave Douglas is hailed as the team's best bet in the giant slalom, and thanks goes to Mike Radin who instructed eight candidates for the Ski Patrol System.

TRAIL CLUB

The Terrapin Trail Club is the campus group who would gladly row a boat, climb a mountain, or hike ten miles. Members are required only to have an inborn love of the outdoors. Activities cover mountain climbing, spelunking (caving), hiking and storm draining. Trail Club meetings offer members a chance to recount past adventures, as well as to plan and to discuss future ventures.

ARGUS

Mythical ship-builder Argus saw all things. He had a hundred eyes. Nothing, not even spirits, escaped his notice.

ARGUS Feature Magazine has been keeping its watchful eyes on the Maryland campus since the Spring of 1966. A small circle of students had become aware that the University had everything but a feature publication. They decided to fill that need with ARGUS.

Since that time, ARGUS has scrutinized the famous and infamous, the heavens and the underworld, the limits of the student's ken. Its readers have enjoyed interviews of Miller Hudson and Bob Ward, learned about the historic, local airport and about the University's enigmatic underground railroad, and have been stimulated by art, photography and humor.

Initially, ARGUS focused mainly on campus events, those of chief interest to the undergraduate. But the periphery of its coverage has extended to encompass news that is not strictly collegiate, yet is of interest to the college student. ARGUS presents a broader view of life, an extended horizon to the young man or woman whose life, because he or she is a student, is somewhat sheltered and isolated from the activities of the non-academic world.

In the future, ARGUS will be peering more deeply into the special enthusiasms of the young adult—self-expression, education, people, politics, love, war, life, death—and the list goes on. ARGUS will be critically looking into broadening the college student's vision.

WMUC, with the addition of Operation 24, brought automation to its programming this year. The campus station, student owned and operated, incorporated Operation 24 to provide an automatic system combining "background" music with regular taped breaks for news and University bulletins. This system made it possible for WMUC to provide round-the-clock music . . . Operation 24 continuing after live broadcasting ended.

The station extended the service to all buildings on campus which have the proper installations. Soon dining halls, the Student Union, the physical plant, and other campus buildings will have use of Operation 24.

WMUC attempts to provide what the students want. Station Manager Eddie Sacks explains, "Because we are a college station, we can be freer and more at ease. We don't commercialize. Rather, we do what the students want." WMUC strives for professional programming, but never loses sight of the fact that it is a college station.

The station remains localized, providing full coverage of all major campus events, from football and basketball games to "specials" such as IFC Sing, Harmony Hall, and "RHC Presents." Frequently WMUC broadcasts feature local University talent, such as band, glee clubs, Flying Follies, and a University Theatre musical. In addition, the station maintains a policy of publicizing as many campus activities as possible.

The excellence of WMUC has not gone unnoticed by either nation-wide or campus-wide personalities. The Intercollegiate Broadcasting System, in 1965, named WMUC the "station of the year." Since that time, no other college station has received that award.

WMUC — "school spirit radio" — takes pride in the campus. Again this year the campus takes pride in WMUC.

COURSE GUIDE

FRED JACOBSON, Editor-in-Chief

Brainchild of the Student-Faculty Union is the three year old University of Maryland Course Guide — a publication that strives to tell it like it is by presenting an accurate evaluation of courses and instructors. The truth may hurt, but Course Guide crusaders cannot coddle the campus.

Every section of every course included in the Guide receives standard systematic treatment. The current procedure confirms that of the students interviewed for each section; one-sixth of the students received an A; one-third, B; one-third, C; and one-sixth, D. The present publication concerns more than 40 departments in seven colleges at the University.

Stimulated by official opposition, Course Guide has become a near-necessity for surviving registration agitation. This Spring, students stepped from advisor to Armory armed with 160 pages of unbiased and uncensored data compiled by the students for the students.

MADRIGALS

Combining their voices and instrumental skills, the twenty Maryland Madrigal Singers have expanded their singing scope and increased their fame hundredfold. Under the direction of Miss Rose Marie Grentzer, these sixteen minstrel singers combine their talents with those of four instrumentalists to produce one of the most enlightening samples of music history ever performed.

Dressed in a traditional cosume of the Renaissance, the group presents renditions of old English and foreign songs dating back to the twelfth century. Yet their talents do not stop with musical precision. In addition, the group has included in their programs selections from fourteen countries and presented many of their songs in nine different languages.

Miss Grentzer has conducted, arranged, and directed the success of the Madrigals since its establishment in 1958. She is currently known nationally as an expert in her music field, and through her constant efforts the Madrigals have attained fame in the international music world.

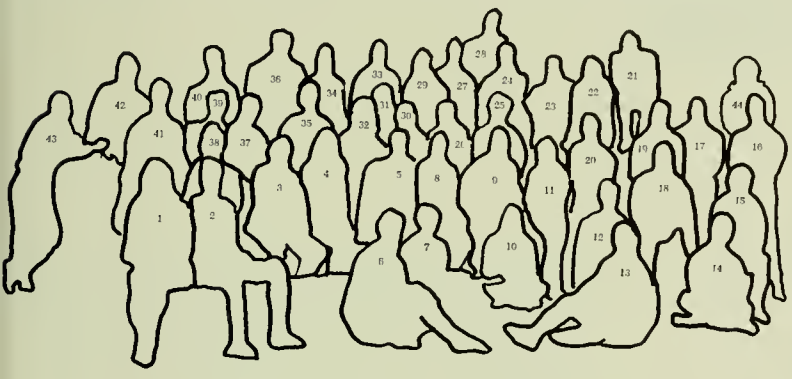
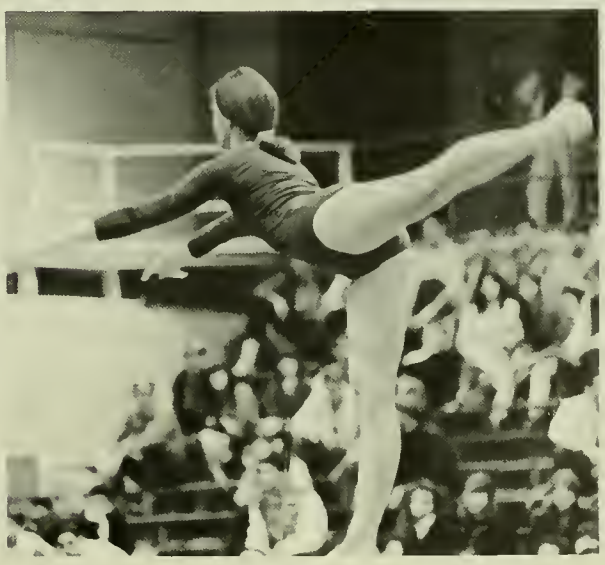
GYMKANA TROUPE





MODERN DANCE

Modern dance exists for the sake of its subject matter, and approaches it through delighting and titillating the esthetic sensibilities. The modern dancer is not obligated to promote grace and beauty; only to show life, man's "inner landscape," for his concern for artistic fidelity to reality is specifically to psychological reality.

Modern dance not only treats ugly subjects, but it shows them as they are in movement that is designed to emphasize rather than to sugarcoat the ugliness. In the same sense, modern choreographers are free to deal with topics lightly, gaily, romantically and lyrically if they so choose, yet always striving to recreate the essence of our existence. It is the dancer who places this essence before our eyes, teaching us about ourselves.

DRAMA WING

Drama Wing was organized in 1957 as a touring theatre troupe for the purpose of "making the intellectual resources of the University available to the people of Maryland." Its members present one-act plays, written by the Broadway playwright, Nora Stirling, before any civic group interested in the behavioral problems of children. Following each performance, the Director, or one trained by him, leads a discussion with the audience, bringing out the salient points of the play and helping members of the audience identify with the characters and situations.

From this original idea, in 1959, the University of Maryland Drama Wing was established as the first dramatic service fraternity in the United States and uses the fraternal letters Epsilon Sigma Delta, "Education and Service through Drama."

In the past eleven years Drama Wing has traveled more than 29,000 miles and performed before more than 49,500 persons in 574 performances, including guest appearances in Washington, D. C., Virginia, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Arkansas, and Missouri.

Supporting the Drama Wing by accepting honorary memberships are Broadway and motion picture personalities Julie Harris, Olivia deHavilland, and Henry Fonda.

Drama Wing presents bi-weekly performances throughout the school year and books many performances over a year in advance.

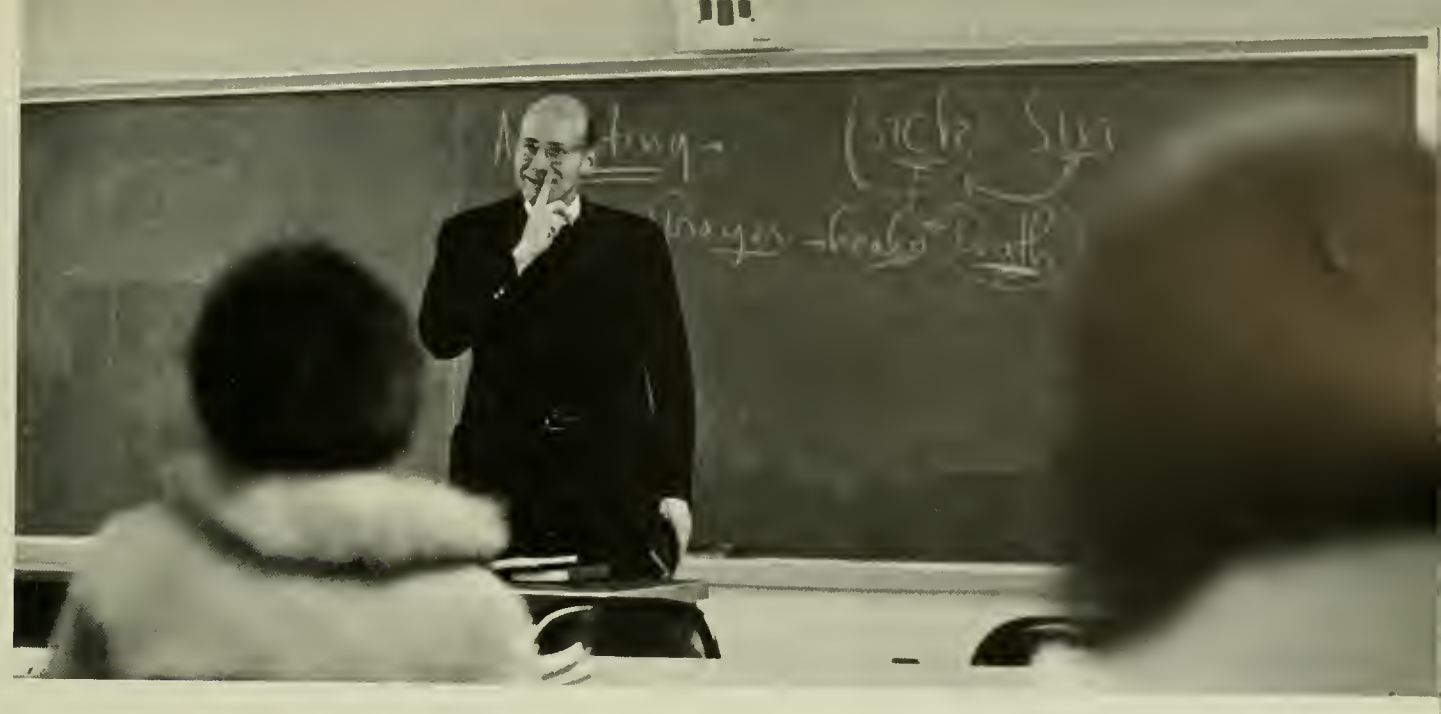
RELIGION

Chapel bells . . . for Protestants, Catholics, and Jews. Here, tradition meets progress. Challenging the Maryland student and enhancing his personal experience has been a goal of the Chapel Staff. Consisting of representatives from UCCF, Methodist, Baptist, Lutheran, and Episcopal faiths, the Chapel staff has sought to reach its goal through individual communication and by developing task oriented groups of active students. Growth groups, creative groups, faith and life seminars, self-developing and self-educating groups, lead to these new experiences. The Chapel Board and the Chapel Choir altered the traditional worship service by advising the Chaplains to develop a worship service of active congregational participation through folk singing and meaningful litergy.

Religion on the Maryland Campus is more than Sunday at church singing folk hymns.



It is involvement. It is fellowship, conversation, discussion. Whether it is a Wesley exchange with Gallaudet, a regular Hillel kosher supper or an education class with Father Wintermeyer the exchange of ideas is a key factor. Learning is an endless process developed by others and also by the self through reflection.

Yet, learning and reflection becomes useless without application. Showing the concern for personal involvement and action, the Chaplains take a strong lead, not only through supporting the Student Rally for Rights, but also in working closely with the Administration and faculty on the many campus issues.

Not limiting application just to the campus, all the major faiths have been involved in social projects starting with Newman's NOW tutoring project, continuing with Hillel's Lakeland tutors and the Protestants Glendale program. These programs and others are expanding and growing in many directions.

Yet, these changes from the traditional to the progressive only require . . .

EDITOR'S NOTE

I would like to take this opportunity to thank several people for their invaluable assistance: to Mr. Clayton Plummer, university purchasing agent, to Bill and Lil Clark, who bailed us out on several occasions, to Jack Isleib, our sales representative and morale booster from Hunter Publishing Company, and especially to Mr. Phil Geraci, our advisor, for his professional and patient assistance.

To the staff, what can I say? Thank you? That's hardly enough! I believe we achieved true unity and spirit this year, especially after those "all-nighter" deadline sessions. I hope that same spirit serves to guide you next year. Best of Luck!

For those who are interested, this year's Terrapin is printed on Warren's Dull Enamel paper, the color feature on Warren's Saxony. The headline type style is Deane, the body type is Caledonia. Our printer is Hunter Publishing Company, in Winston-Salem, North Carolina. The cover design, by Scott Moores and Alan Isicson, was manufactured by Kingskraft (Kingsport Press, Inc.), in Kingsport, Tennessee.

It's finished now. The plans of a year ago have fulfilled themselves in 464 pages of the year 1967-1968.

So what. What makes this year's Terrapin different from any other — the capsule replay of a year with a complete file of names and faces?

Every year an editor swears how he (or she) is going to do something individual, something challenging, something to set this year apart from the others. Yet each year an editor has to sacrifice his plans and schemes because he hasn't enough money, because he hasn't the needed cooperation, because he finds it impractical in the printing process — something always seems to bring him back down to earth! In spite of these "hang-ups" an editor's sense of responsibility and professional pride charge him to produce nothing less than a modern, interesting, representative book.

Let me tell you what's different about this year's Terrapin: Sure we've got group pictures, lots of them, but many have been taken "on location" — in the place of the group's choice — and we've included outlines for easier identification.

We also tried to highlight several of the little known "action" groups, hence their 2-page spreads.

Under Student Life, you'll find a feature prefacing each section on what commuting, living in a dorm and being a Greek is really like.

The sports section is also featurized, especially basketball, and each sport winds up with the team picture.

Administrators are humanized, appearing casually in their everyday working situations, rather than in formal "stock" poses. Each college is characterized as well, with representative pictures and descriptive copy.

Seniors are first this year, appearing by college, with an index of their activities at the end of the book. Many of those not pictured are mentioned in the index.

Finally, our color feature section focuses upon you, the student. The issues most prevalent on campus speak out here, from drinking to student rights. Almost by chance, the feature's message emerged, reflected in nearly all of our photographers' pictures.

Ideally, we're all here for a purpose. Our purpose in this year's Terrapin is to reflect the identity of the past year, 1967-1968, with selected emphases. Throughout these pages, identify. Relate yourself to the year, find for 1967-1968 a purpose, and place it in perspective among those gone by and those to come.

The true test of the 1968 Terrapin will come many years from now. If you are able to pick it up and relive at least in part what you've experienced here at the University of Maryland, then I believe its purpose is well served.
